We Canadians, together with the citizens of the United States and Great Britain, will eat less sugar during the balance of 1945.

To meet our own needs and the urgent requirements of our Allies and the liberated countries, our share of the reduction must total nearly 200,000,000 pounds of sugar during the rest of the year.

To assure fair distribution of what is left, the sugar ration is to be cut by five pounds during the next seven months by reducing the monthly allotment to one pound in June, July, August, October and December. In September and November, the allowance will remain unchanged at two pounds.

The ten pound sugar allotment for home canning, represented by twenty extra preserves coupons, remains unchanged. Two regular preserves coupons will continue to become valid each month.

ANSWERS TO YOUR QUESTIONS ABOUT SUGAR

Q. How does Canada get its share of world sugar supplies?

A. World stocks are pooled by the Combined Food Board of the United Nations which allows sugar to Canada, United States and Great Britain on a uniform per capita basis.

Q. Where does the rest of the world sugar supply go?

A. To other claimants, including liberated areas, European neutrals, Russia, the Middle East, New Zealand and other sugar-importing countries. Approximately one-half of this total is destined for liberated areas.

Q. Is there less sugar in the world today?

A. Yes. Because needs are up and production is down, world sugar stocks reached a new low at the beginning of 1945. By the end of the year, they will be down again, this time to a dangerous minimum.

Q. Why is there more demand for sugar?

A. The rising demand largely reflects the needs of liberated areas.

Q. Why is there less production?

A. World sugar output is lower for these reasons:

1. Enemy occupation of some sources such as Java and the Philippines. Java, of course, is still in Japanese hands and, although the Philippines are liberated, production is not expected to be restored until late in 1945.
2. Other export countries have experienced serious shortages of labour and fertilizer.
3. Record drought conditions and hurricanes have also cut into production in the important West Indian area.

INDUSTRIAL AND QUOTA USERS WILL ALSO GET LESS

Effective July 1, 1945, sugar made available to industrial users, such as bakers, biscuit and breakfast cereal manufacturers, makers of soft drinks, confectionery and candy, and jam and wine manufacturers, will again be reduced.

A further cut is also being made in the allotment to quota users, such as public eating places, while similar reductions are being made by the Armed Forces in the sugar quotas for service personnel.

Blood, Sweat And Tears

IN A RECENT ARTICLE PUBLISHED by the British Ministry of Information, some of the facts relating to Britain's part in the Allied victory in Europe are reviewed and a number of interesting details concerning her mighty war effort are made known. Events move so quickly in these times that public attention is constantly directed to new situations and developments. It should never be forgotten, however, that the people of Britain remained firm in the face of what they stood in the way of complete victory for the conquering German and Italian armies in Western Europe. Had they given up at that time, the liberation of Europe would have been delayed for many years, and would have been doubly difficult to accomplish. Five years ago, Mr. Churchill told the nation that "blood, sweat and tears" lay ahead and the article states that this promise was accepted by the British people "in the greatest unspoken contract in history."

Heavy Losses Were Suffered

Time has shown that the story of Britain's part in the war in Europe was indeed one of blood, sweat and tears, but it is also a story of determination, courage and success. Before the defeat of Germany, military security prevented the publication of many details concerning the British war effort. It is now known, however, that 5,600,000 men of military age served in the armed forces of the United Kingdom. This represented more than one in every nine persons in the entire population. Casualties in the services are given as one out of every ten men. Up to the end of August, 1944, civilian casualties due to enemy action totalled 57,000 killed and 79,000 injured. One out of every three homes in Britain were destroyed or damaged by enemy action, 200,000 being totally destroyed up to the end of September, 1944. Robot bomb attacks, which came after "D" Day damaged or destroyed over one million homes.

Produced For United Nations

In spite of the great diversion of manpower to the armed forces, and in spite also of the heavy air attacks, production of military equipment and supplies in British factories reached enormous proportions. From these factories came seventy per cent. of all the arms and equipment for the United Kingdom, Dominions, Indian and Colonial forces until "D" Day, and one-third of all the equipment of the United States forces in the European theatre from June, 1942, to June, 1944. In addition, up to June 1944, $1,200,000,000 worth of supplies including fighter planes and tanks had been sent to Russia. During the German occupation of Europe, Britain was the rallying point for patriots from all parts of the Continent, and British leaders did much to unify the great United Nations front against Nazi tyranny. Britain's war effort is now being directed towards the defeat of Japan. When peace is restored, there will remain the great task of world reconstruction, and the writer for the British Ministry of Information says: "In this work Great Britain, in concert with her fellow nations of the Commonwealth, is prepared to shoulder the same responsibilities of leadership which have seen the world through its greatest military crises."

Russian Ambassador To United States Lost Something About Cake

Earl Wilson tells a story about Litvinoff, former Russian ambassador to the United States, who on a visit to the White House was served some delicious "Washington Cake". The cake was of white filling and white icing. Remembering it when on a train later, Litvinoff asked a Negro dining-car waiter for Washington Cake. The waiter served him a piece of delicious chocolate cake with chocolate icing.

"This is a funny country," Litvinoff said to the waiter. "The Washington Cake I had was all white. This is all black."

"Well," replied the waiter, "in this country we have two Washingtons—George and Booker T."

London Churches

Many Edifices Suffered Severely From Bomb Raids

If legend is true, there hasn't been a Cockney born in London since early in 1941.

Legend says that to be a true Cockney one has to be born within the sound of the Bow Bells and these bells haven't sounded since the Spring of 1941 when the Church of St. Mary-Le-Bow was burned out in the blitz. It was these bells which legend says called Dick Whittington back to London to be Lord Mayor. St. Mary-Le-Bow was not alone in suffering from air raids. Through the European war years when the Germans struck intermittently at this capital, 66 churches were damaged or destroyed, among them some world-famous because of their beauty of design or religious tradition.

St. Paul's, its massive dome a natural target, was among the first to be hit. It was shaken in 1940, but the most serious blow came in April, 1941, when a bomb pierced the wall and debris from the roof collapsed part of the main floor and destroyed the cathedral's renowned organ.

A month later Westminster Abbey was hit, its 16th century structure being shaken at the same time the nearby houses of Parliament were damaged.

Another ecclesiastical building to suffer was Lambeth Palace, traditional home of the Archbishops of Canterbury. The chapel was hardest hit, but the entire structure was pitted with bomb fragments. St. Clement Danes, about whose chimneys have been written the jingle "Oranges and Lemons says the Bells of St. Clements," was also virtually destroyed.

Christ Church, which has as part of its structure the Lincoln Tower commemorating the abolition of slavery in the United States, was hit early in 1941 and the tower, built in 1867, toppled.

One of the most beautiful London churches destroyed was St. Stephen's, a small but exquisite structure designed by Sir Christopher Wren. The interior of St. Stephen's was believed to have been Wren's model for St. Paul's.

Another to go was the one round church in the city, Temple Church, known as the finest Norman cathedral in Europe and burial place of Oliver Goldsmith. St. Leonard's, where Dr. Samuel Johnson worshipped, was destroyed in 1941.

Religious centres of the various races which make up London's cosmopolitan life were not spared. The Dutch church of Austin Friars, where Netherlands have worshipped since 1540, was hit, as was Notre Dame de France, centre of French religious activity.

The bombing, however, brought some compensations. When St. Mary's, in Islington Borough, was damaged the plaster on the roof fell, revealing unknown beauties of ancient carvings.

Experts went over the ruins to discover hitherto unknown secrets of design which will help beautify Britain's churches of tomorrow.

Educating The Nazi

This Lady Appeared To Be Able To Defy Authority

A story which reaches me from Italy will appeal to those who, as small boys or girls, have trembled in the tutored presence. It concerns an English governess of majestic deportment resident in Florence. She was there when the Nazis took over and was in no way disconcerted by the institution of the "new order". From her angle it was merely another foreign eccentricity.

The Nazis took themselves more seriously. They decided that the governess should go to a concentration camp, and one of them went to arrest her. He found an erect and quite composed lady who addressed him as if he were a small boy caught in a misdemeanor.

"My good man," she said coldly, "you can't arrest me. I'm English." And he didn't. She was still there when the Allies arrived.—Leeds Yorkshire Post.

Price Control And Rationing Information

Q—I have been discharged from the army and wish to move into my own home. Will I have to give the present tenants six-months' notice?

A—The Prices Board has announced new rental regulations as of June 1, 1945, which will enable honorably discharged veterans of the Canadian armed forces to re-occupy homes owned by them after giving the present tenants a three months notice to vacate.

Q—To settle an argument how high did the cost of living go after the 1914-18 war and what is the figure to date in the present war.

A—On Armistice Day, Nov. 11, 1918, the cost of living index figure was 53.8 higher than in July of 1914, the month before that war started. The peak of inflation occurred 20 months after Armistice Day, 1918, and in July of 1920 when the peak was reached the cost of living figure was 191.6 which meant you paid almost twice as much for goods in July of 1920 than you did before that war started. The figure for this war is now 18.1 above the August, 1939 figure and is only 2.3 above the cost of living figure of November, 1941, when price control became an actuality.

Q—Are dealers obliged when selling oranges to display cards marked with the size of the oranges?

A—Yes, price and size of oranges displayed must be clearly marked.

Q—Is there any chance of my being able to buy more canned grapefruit juice than has been available the last few months?

A—There is no prospect of increased supplies of grapefruit juice this year. Because of adverse grapefruit crop conditions in the United States and heavy commitments to the armed forces, Canada's allotment of pure grapefruit juice for this year has been reduced. However, to offset this loss, limited quantities of blended grapefruit and orange juice will be available.

A pal said to me yesterday "How's the wife?"

"Her back's troubling her," I told him.

Lumbago?"

"No, she wants a new fur coat."

And her husband has a prospect of being recognized by Winston.

"Oh, yes, he is taking in a lot of money. Only last night he told me a receiver was to be appointed to assist him."

They were discussing a certain M.P.

"The trouble with him," observed the cynic, "is that he takes too modest a view of his own insincerity."

"For the first time since I've dined at this restaurant the charge is reasonable," said the guest.

"Reasonable?" echoed the waiter, surprised. "I had better have another look at the bill. There must be some mistake."

As the shifty-looking individual prepared to leave the restaurant, another diner accosted him timidly:

"Excuse me, but do you happen to be John Smith of Newcastle?"

"No, I'm not," snapped the shifty fellow aggressively.

"Oh—er—well," replied the other, "you see, I am, and that's his overcoat you're putting on!"

A young soldier who has escaped over the frontier into Switzerland from a prisoner-of-war camp wrote to his father: "Hope to return home soon, so kill the fatted calf. Is anything you would like me to bring?"

His father wrote back: "Yes—bring fatted calf."

An English tourist travelling in the north of Scotland, far away from anywhere, exclaimed to one of the natives:

"Why, what do you do when any of you are ill? You can never get a doctor."

"Nae, sir," replied Sandy, "we've just to dee a natural death."

"Where are you going this summer?"

"Well, I'm looking for novelty. I want to be in some place where I can do as I choose and where the summer scenery will be brand new to me."

"Have you found such a place?"

"Yes, I'm going to stay home."

Protecting Churchill In The Baking Industry

Was Really Hard Job For Security Officers During War

It may be revealed now that our security officers several times had heart shocks during the bad days, and even the good ones, of the European war. Particular precautions were taken to see that not a whisper escaped about Britain's Prime Minister's many hazardous missions, reports a London correspondent. On his first visit to President Roosevelt, Mr. Churchill embarked at Greenock in H.M.S. Duke of York. He was recognized by hundreds of people as he drove to naval headquarters on the Clyde, and made matters worse by freely chatting with delighted Wrens and service people of all kinds. Nor was it possible for anyone to mistake his figure, standing on the Admiralty barge, and further identified by the big cigar he was puffing. On his next Clyde departure the security officers were determined to take extra precautions against this sort of thing, for the U-boat campaign was at its peak. So they ran the Prime Minister down to the Gareloch and by steamer to where the Queen Mary awaited her illustrious passenger. But the steamer met a treacherous crowd with G.L.'s, who promptly recognized Winston with a mighty cheer, to which Winston responded by waving his hat and making the inevitable V sign.

Bread Baked By Rays Is One Of New Achievements

New things to come in the baking industry in Canada, as predicted by E. R. Taylor, general manager George Weston Ltd., Toronto, before the Canadian Manufacturers' Association: Sliced bread with a mixed assortment of breads—white, brown, rye, raisin—all in one package. Bread baked by rays instead of in oven—baked from the inside out. This, he said, is already being done on a small scale.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

EASY DOES IT

By M. T. GRIFFIN

McClure Newspaper Syndicate

Edna Benton was less than half-way to the Point when rain drops began splattering on the windshield. "Tee-tee!" she muttered. The night driving was bad enough, but driving in the rain—it was getting chilly, too. She had nothing over her wool dress. When Paul called at eight to say that he was marooned in a crazy little place called Harper's Point, and that he had just missed the only night train, she had answered gaily, "Don't worry, old dear, I'm already on the way. See you within an hour." And she had hopped into the car just as she was.

It was a surprise to have Paul returning so soon. He had expected to be away four or five days, and now here he was coming back after only two. The car was in the shop when he left. She was glad the repairs were finished in time for this.

The rain was coming down heavily now. She drew over to the curb and looked in the back seat for a possible wrap. Ah, Paul's jacket. Just the thing. She pulled it out gratefully. It smelled of strong tobacco, and one of his many pipes was in the pocket. She drove more slowly as she left the city lights behind her. Out this far people were apt to be walking in the road, and she could not see very well through the driving rain.

She was well out in the country when her headlights picked out the figure of a woman walking ahead of her. It was a funny sight. She was holding a newspaper over her head in a vain attempt to keep dry. On an impulse Edna stopped. "Throw away the make-believe umbrella and hop in," she cried.

"Gee, thanks!" She was dripping water all over the car floor. "Wish you'd happened along about a mile back. This bonnet of mine set me back four-hard-earned dollars." She had removed the hat and was gazing ruefully at it. "And look at it now."

Edna looked. It was bright red straw top-heavy with trimming. "I wouldn't give four cents for it, Edna thought. Aloud she said, "Pretty drooping looking, all right." Then, "Do you usually go walking in the rain?"

"Only way you can get anywhere around here is walk," said the woman. "Ain't lucky enough to own a car." As an afterthought she added, "Say, this is a pretty nice bus you've got, dearie. Don't you think it's a little bit risky picking up strangers? After all, you're just a kid, you know, and it's pretty lonely around these parts."

"I can take care of myself," said Edna. But already she regretted her impulsive act. She stole a glance at her guest. Hair-belled, she thought, and her heart began to pound heavily.

The woman kept up a stream of smart talk. Edna responded brightly, consoling herself with the thought: She'll be getting off at the next house, sure. Houses were few and far between, but they came and went and still her passenger made no move.

It was when they reached the wooded stretch that Edna missed her bag. It had been lying in her lap, and now there was nothing there. Nothing at all. Her hands were moist on the steering wheel and her lips were dry. A month's house money. And Paul worked so hard for it. What would he say? She had only herself to blame for this. Then a wave of relief swept over her. The bag must have fallen to the floor. She slowed the car and peered down hopefully. But nothing—nothing anywhere.

"Drop something?" asked the voice beside her. Edna did not answer. She couldn't. She thought, It must have happened when I turned to wind up the window. This was a dangerous woman. Edna dared not move. She sat like an image, her mind in a whirl, her pounding heart supporting her. A month's house money. She had to get it back. Suddenly she had an idea.

She brought the car to a halt with grinding brakes, dropped her hand into the pocket of the jacket, jabbed the stem of Paul's pipe into the woman's side and said in a curiously calm voice: "Drop the bag, sister, and get going!"

It was ridiculously easy. She heard the woman's quick intake of breath, the thud of the bag falling on the floor, and the bang of the car door. Then she was speeding, speeding.

"Oh, Paul," she said tearfully, as she drew up beside him. "It sure is good to see you!"

"It's good to see you, too," said Paul. "But what's the matter, kitten? You look funny."

"Get in and I'll tell you," he said, sliding out of the driver's seat.

"Here, take this with you," he said, picking up the sofa pillow she always sat on. Then, "Hello! A new place for this, isn't it?"

"For what?" she asked, turning. He was holding something in his hand. For a moment she just sat there stricken. It was her pocket-book. Now she remembered putting it under the pillow when she stopped to get the jacket. She clapped her hand over her mouth to hold back a scream.

"Edna for Pete's sake, what is it?" shouted Paul.

For answer she snapped on the car light. There on the floor at her feet lay a bright red patent leather bag.

Quinine Still Scarce

Java The Only World Source Is Held By Japanese

Quinine, the drug essential in combating malaria, continues one of the most acute supply shortages, Munitions Department officials said. When the Japs took Java in early 1942, with it went the only world source of quinine. The Allies had a stockpile but it was not large enough to give assurance of adequate supplies and against it was an increasing demand.

The development of air routes over malaria-infested areas, fighting in Africa and the Pacific war itself meant new demands for quinine.

Intensified fighting in the Pacific is going to mean a further increase in these requirements, and so far synthetic substitutes have not gone far in meeting the call, so the Allied stockpile continues to be the main source, and it is going down.

HOG PRODUCTION DECLINES

Reflecting sharp reductions in the United States and Canada, the world's hog production declined about nine per cent. during last year to complicate the problem of stretching meat supplies over a war-weary world, the office of foreign agricultural relations at Washington said.

• Canada thru a peephole: At the Mennonite song festival to be held in Winnipeg, will be heard a choir of 1000 voices; a solid special train is bringing folk in from the Morden line. . . . Jim Winters, Alberta nonagenarian, got a cable of congratulations from King George on his 104th birthday; he celebrated with a new set of "store teeth". . . . In the Carleton, Alta., News of May 24, the Old Chief Cafe advertised a special dinner with a la mode for 65 cents, including a pack of gum or chocolate bar free as well as tomato catsup free. . . . Councillors of Sidney Township in Ontario decided to pay $25 as a gift to each service person returning from overseas.

• For the first time with the market for pit props for British mines open to British Columbia, 10,000 cords will be sent from the area from the Campbell River to Victoria; another 90,000 cords will go from the interior. Cost on delivery will be $100 a cord, compared with $20 which used to be paid by Britain for Scandinavian deliveries.

• The antithesis of Nazi brutality: F. S. Lucas, of Canora, Sask., has started a little ornitho hospital on his own, with the first patient being a robin with a broken wing. He put a splint on the damaged wing in the hope that the bird would again become a hard working member of society. The robin was a U.S.A. hand.

• A patriot in her own right: Little ten-year Patsy Finlay of Lacombe, Alta., has been an invalid, confined to bed, but she wanted to do her bit for the war. Carefully glancing the odd pennies, nickels, dimes and quarters from her parents, she is now the proud possessor of two $50 victory bonds—for the Canada she loves.

• Far in the north, community spirit: A pleasant sight at Mabel Hill school near Nipawin, Sask., as every farmer in the neighborhood was out with rake, hoe, paint brush and hammer, to give the school its annual clean-up and repair. At 11:30 the womenfolk put in an appearance with a delicious hot dinner, after which they all pitched in till eventide and a swell job was accomplished.

• International trade: The first complete herd of dairy cattle ever shipped to Mexico was assembled at Lindsay, Ont., where 108 well bred Holstein-Friesians were bought for the Guajalajara ranch of Jesus Gonzales Gallo, secretary to the Mexican president. Most came from breeders between Lindsay and Belleville, and two bulls from Vaudeville, Que.

But German Field Marshal Took Orders From British Bombarrier

Field Marshal von Milch, one time successor to Goering, and General Hasso von Manteuffel, former commander of the German Third Panzer Army, are in a Lunenburg prison camp, where officially they live on Army rations.

But they are eking these out with champagne, eggs and caviars brought to them almost daily by women admirers and friends.

German girls stand outside the gates in groups, hoping to get the general's autograph.

Once von Milch was impatient as not being able to go for his walk at the time he wished. A guard Bombarrier Hadley, from Durham, told him to wait.

"Who are you to give an order to a field marshal?" snorted Milch.

Then a bombardier in the British Army, said Hadley—London Daily Express.

fouled the air of Fort St. John on the night of Victory Day, when the beautiful centaph, decked with flags of the United Nations, erected by patriotic hands, was bashed in and defaced by hoodlums, bitterly comments the Alaska Highway News.

• The best response to the traveling X-ray unit of the Manitoba Sanatorium board was at Dauphin in May, when a total of 7,541 persons from the town and surrounding district received chest X-rays in 13 days. 91.1 per cent of the urban population "got took".

• Premontion: Sgt. W. J. Maitland, D.F.M., son of B.C.'s Attorney General, lost his life in action last year in the skies over Germany. His mother, searching through his boyhood scrapbook, recently found this poem written by her son when he was twelve years of age, which foretold the war and his death. That was only six years ago. Canadians can well read this and think:

"We are the heroes of the air. We fight and laugh and die and roar; To come near us no foe would dare. For such a stream of lead we pour. "Our planes go crashing to the ground; Our men fear not the sight of Hell. And some of us lie beneath a mound. Who for their King and Country fell."

"Oh how the dusky tempest blew As the battle in the sky kept on. And through the air the bullets flew Until the brightness of the dawn."

'Twas ON THE ISLE OF CAPRI—

First Canadian servicewoman to be posted to an active theatre of operations, was Capt. Cynthia Oakley, formerly of Toronto, who spent five and one half years overseas in England and Italy. Highlight of her stay in Italy was a surprise visit from her sister, Sgt. Helen Oakley of the United States Women's Army Corps, who is stationed in Algiers. "She hitch-hiked by plane and just walked in on me one day at work," Capt. Oakley explained. The sisters spent several happy days together on the song-famous Isle of Capri, a welcome interlude from army work. Capt. Oakley returned to England when the Canadian troops were moved out of Italy. She has since been returned to Canada and is now employed in the Directorate of Military Training in Ottawa.

RETIRED—

Lt.-Col. Mary J. Dover, special assistant to the D.A.G. (C), has recently been retired from the Canadian Women's Army Corps. Lt.-Col. Dover is the daughter of the late Mr. A. E. C. Dover and Mrs. Cross, of Calgary, Alta., and the wife of Major Melville Grant Dover, Ceylon manager of the Ford Motor Company of India, Ltd., recently returned to Canada after serving in the Ceylon Garrison Artillery. Col. Dover has had a colorful career both in the C.W.A.C. and before she received her appointment to the Corps. On the completion of her schooling she went to England on a short trip with her parents. In 1928 she started on a world tour and it was on that trip that she met her husband in Bombay. They were married in Calgary in April, 1930. Following their marriage, they returned to Bombay, and for the next two years, Mrs. Dover travelled extensively with her husband in India and Burma. In 1933 their son David was born. In June, 1939, Mrs. Dover and David returned to Calgary. After the outbreak of war she became chairman of three federal ridings, Calgary East, Calgary West and Bow Valley for the National Registration of Women. In September, 1941, she received her appointment to the C.W.A.C. and has served in various capacities in the Corps up until her recently announced retirement.

DISABLED WAR VETERANS

Employers must develop an approach toward disabled in which men are placed in jobs on the basis of ability rather than by the measure of their disability. Maj. E. A. Dunlop, supervisor of the casualty section of the Veterans Affairs Department, said before a meeting of the Dominion of Canada Council of Foremen's Clubs.

Use of warm colors such as yellows, creams and browns in painting a room will give the room the illusion of added warmth. Use of blues and greens will make it feel cooler than it actually is.

Motoring In Britain

Gasoline Ration Sufficient For Only 120 Miles A Month

British motorists, barred from the highways since the start of the war more than 5 1/2 years ago, have returned to the road with gasoline rations sufficient to drive 120 miles a month.

The Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders estimated that lifting of the ban would result in the return to use of approximately 250,000 pleasure cars, bringing to about 750,000 the number of vehicles on the highways. Before the war 2,000,000 cars travelled the roads.

Trade circles expressed belief that return of many pre-war cars would be delayed because of a use tax of approximately $5 per horsepower, compulsory insurance and the high price of gasoline—about 43 cents a gallon.

For the present, most drivers will have to be satisfied with machines of pre-war vintage. A purchase tax of 28 1/2 per cent, plus scarcity of materials and labor, will limit the number of new cars on the road for some time to come.

Is The Stork Losing His Job?

Canadian flying men have moved a lot of strange cargoes both at home and abroad in the last several years, but when a Quebec City Airport the other day, found for Chicoutimi, it carried one of the strangest loads of all—five babies, not one of them over five months old!

The infants were being transferred from La Creche Saint-Vincent-de-Paul in Quebec to Chicoutimi—a long train ride, but only an hour away by air. L'Abbe Germain, priest in charge of the orphanage, contacted officials of Quebec Airways, a Canadian Pacific Air Lines subsidiary, with the result that the babies flew, and all in one plane-load. Ordinarily, the aircraft carries ten passengers and a crew of three. But with Sister Coeur Immacule and Sister

Marie de la Reparation, who were also making their first airplane flight, the total number of souls aboard was thirty-one. Even so, with each baby weighing an average of ten pounds, it was a far lighter load than customary.

Special three-place cribs, made of plywood, were built so that each box would fit into one seat in the airplane. Wrapped snugly in baby blankets, and strapped in both boxes and seats, even the roughest of air could not have tossed the tiny infants out. And as it turned out, there wasn't even one bump on the entire trip. "They didn't give a bit of trouble," said Stewardess Joan Harland, a veteran hostess of the airline. "After the take-off, they just went to sleep, and that's all there was to it!"

Bachelor Captain Art Leach, pilot of the plane, didn't have much to say: "They were squealing when I went forward before take-off, and they were squealing after I landed," he announced grumpily.

Said First Officer Gordon Alexander: "I didn't hear a thing. Had the ear-phones on all the time." Then, musingly, "Seems to me static was a little worse than usual, though!"

The Old, Old Story

It was with great satisfaction that we read a statement issued by the Dominion Experimental Station, Lethbridge, to the effect that if farmers fail to control soil drifting, the necessary measures will, some day, have to be enforced. We are apt to forget that democracy entails personal responsibility as well as privilege. Too often we slide-step the former and cling to the latter. Soil drifting has been very serious in parts of Western Canada this year. It should be recognized as a prelude to catastrophe and given the widest possible publicity; but, probably because we are ashamed of it, little is spoken by radio and little written in the press.

It is annoying and costly to the farmer to have his seed blown out or seedlings out to pieces with drifting sand. The most patient and long-suffering housewife may be had company when floors and furniture are covered with layers of soil, and when pantries and clothes cupboards become dust bins. But these experiences are trivial in comparison with the permanent damage done to productive soils.

Government agriculturists are almost always conservative in their claims; but over and over again officials of the Dominion Department of Agriculture have declared that soil drifting can be controlled. The recent warning from Lethbridge is timely and we dare not disregard it.
